

Clare McIvor
Writer

Clare McIvor is a writer and communications specialist with qualifications in business and communications and thirteen years of experience working at the intersection of healthcare, research and professional communication.

Clare has partnered with Chiropractors, Chiropractic research organisations and health writers to communicate research, elevate professional voices and make complex ideas accessible to broader audiences. Her work has included ghostwriting, research communication, editorial development and content strategy, supporting practitioners and researchers to share their knowledge with clarity and purpose.

She is passionate about making research accessible while maintaining philosophical coherence and scientific rigour.

Her work reflects a commitment to bridging the gap between research, professional practice and public understanding, with an emphasis on clear communication that respects both scientific evidence and the philosophical foundations of healthcare.

Clare lives in Melbourne, Australia, with her two children.

e: oscar.bacino@icloud.com