

Tony Rosner

Anthony Rosner, Ph.D., is a notable figure in the field of chiropractic research and education. He has made significant contributions to the understanding of Chiropractic care through his extensive work as an author and researcher.

Professional Background

Director of Research: Formerly served as the director of research for the Foundation for Chiropractic Education and Research.

Education: Holds a Ph.D. in biological chemistry/medical sciences from Harvard University, graduated in 1972.

Contributions to Chiropractic

Research and Publications: Authored numerous articles and studies that explore various aspects of chiropractic care, including its effectiveness and applications in healthcare.

Expertise: His research spans both orthodox and alternative medicine, showcasing a broad understanding of healthcare practices.

Current Role

As of 2020, Rosner continues to work as a medical consultant, experimental designer, and manuscript reviewer, furthering his impact on the c\Chiropractic profession and healthcare research.

e: arosner66@aol.com