

David Walls-Kaufman
Chiropractor

David Walls-Kaufman DC, is a 1980 Palmer College of Chiropractic graduate, retired Chiropractic physician, published author, and independent researcher certified by the NIH in human-subjects and outcomes research.

He is CBP-certified, a lifetime member of the International Chiropractors Association, Chiropractic History Association, and a past member of the Council on Chiropractic Practice Guidelines Committee.

David has presented on Chiropractic history and brain-first healthcare and has done extensive charity work. He is an award-winning short story author and the author of two Chiropractic novels, Robot, Archangel and Caesar Americus: One Party Rule.

His current book, The Genius Machine and the Theory of Everything, investigates structural integrity, stress, health, aging, and longevity in relation to broader issues of social cohesion and economics. He consults with Cervigard on its international outreach and with Grit & Stone AI. His work can be followed at GeniusMachine.com.

e: walls.kaufman@icloud.com